OrcAD Capture User's Guide: How to Install orCad Capture Jan 30, 2011 . . A: You can modify the license file to reference your current license key (this is referred to as a feature string) by visiting the 'License Setup' page on your Licensing Server. This page allows you to customize the feature string (which identifies the version of the license file) with the same key that you are currently using in 'Cadence'. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration recommends that highway maintenance workers use reflective safety vests while driving to reduce the chance of accidents in dark conditions. The NHTSA is concerned that wearing a reflective vest while driving may give motorists a false sense of security and slow down their reaction times, a hazard when driving in the dark. They recognize that there are good reasons why bright stripes or designs on a vest might help motorists to see the vest. However, in order to be sure that the vest is visible, the NHTSA is also concerned that the vests' bright color and designs may actually distract motorists and slow their reaction time. "When it comes to highway maintenance workers, there are plenty of distractions on the roads such as vehicles, people, debris and even trash. Many of them are in the dark, which makes reflective strips and designs on a worker's reflective vest even more imperative," says NHTSA. The government agency is advising that instead of bright colors, road workers should go for colors such as orange, red, yellow, white, blue, green and grey. This way, any light source shining on the vest can be seen. "Tests have shown that a road worker wearing a white vest can be seen from 200 feet away in total darkness, and three times that distance when the vest's light 3da54e8ca3
