A fabulous game in which the player should try to get as many symbols as possible on a 3x5 grid.Â· This invention relates to automatic register control or proximity sensing apparatus and in particular to control circuits employing a plurality of sensing devices. Various types of register control apparatus employing sensors for determining a position of a movable part relative to a fixed part are well known. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,931,616, issued Jan. 13, 1976, discloses an arrangement in which scanning lamps are disposed within an angle of a leading edge of a material to be inspected for purposes of indicating when the edge is closest to the camera. In a similar arrangement, U.S. Pat. No. 3,538,084, issued Sept. 1, 1970, shows a test device in which a light beam is generated to the left or to the right of the path of travel to determine whether a part to be inspected is moving to the left or to the right with respect to a movable part, and, hence, is moving in a proper direction. In this device, a series of pulses are generated to indicate to the operator when an object is approaching a desired position. In a similar arrangement, U.S. Pat. No. 3,652,537, issued Mar. 28, 1972, a light beam from a pair of light sources is directed in an arcuate path toward a part to be inspected. A camera is disposed in the path of the arcuate beam to determine whether the part is moving properly to the right or to the left of a desired path. In each of these devices, the sensing arrangement is dependent upon the movement of an edge of a part, which edge is to be scanned by the sensing arrangement in order to ensure that the movement of the part occurs in the appropriate direction. This can be unsatisfactory, since the edge of a part may be displaced from the intended path, such as when a part is damaged, or in addition to the above, if a part has one or more of its edges marked or otherwise stained so as to make the part irregularly shaped. Such markings may easily be detected by the arrangement of the prior art, thereby causing a false reading to be made. In addition to the arrangement of the above-cited prior art, U.S. Pat. No. 3,845,475, issued d0c515b9f4
